You can talk about the others That you pick up from the game, But, believe me, sportive brothers, There is nothing quite the same As the heart beat where the back'll Take his rush against the foe As he slips through guard and tackle For the last four yards to go.

Baseball knows its long series of thrills that stand between the home run and the long running one-handed catch that shuts off the winning triple There are thrills enough in golf and tennis, but they are more of the inward, philosophical brand. We are speaking now from the viewpoint of the player, not from the non-combatant up in the stand. No other team in the country has lost so many stars. Ends, backs and No other team in the country has lost so many stars. Ends, backs and line men to something like twelve or fitteen in number have left the old haunts and Rockre must send a new squad to the firing line. Yet in spite of all this we have a hunch that Notre Dame will not be named as the weakest entry of the year when the final records are rushed to print. The impetus of a winning system carries quite a way. quite a way.

"Did Morvich lose heart after his first defeat?" asks a reader.

We are hardly close enough to equine psychology to say. It is difficult enough to dope ou the various intractes of the human soul, which has a baffling way of dipping in various directions. Morvich never has been the same horse since he took his first trimming, but whether or not he lost heart, the fact remains that he lost most of his speed. The race may not always be to the swift, but we know of few better directions in which to look.

"Is Tilden," questions a bystander, "as great a master of tennis style as Jones is a master of the golfing swing." Tilden gives the impression of as much power and fully as great an effectiveness, but there is a lack of equal grace and charm of play. Tilden is as much a master of every stroke, but his style, to look upon, is not quite as free and exalted above not quite as free and exalted above the crowd.

If Dempsey and Wills ever meet," says an exchange, 'we will at least a rest have a chance to see a much longer general have a chance to see a much longer battle than at any heavyweight meeting for some time." Both are terrific hitters. Both believe in closing in and letting fly with both barrels. The human chin and the human rib can stand only so much, and it is hardly probable that both will decide to stand apart and box at long range. There is just as good a chance that the meeting will be closed out in two or three rounds.

Ye olde knights used to fight to protect the fair fame of the devices emblazoned on their shields. And the knight without escutcheon was looked upon askance. He had no name to protect. He could live fairly or unfairly, as his whims directed.
